one that will shirk from all kinds of work, But will read each new romance and "chig-nons" and "rats" 'neath small-est of hats, With a pan-nier as-sist-ing to mar-rie's a man as- soon as she can, And in most ca-ses weds him for son - net, Wears feath - ers and frills like por - cu - pine quills, Stuck a - "bend" her, With cheeks cher - ry red, tho' paint - ed 'tis said, With a mon - ey. And twixt you and I, she'll so make it fly That he'll round in a piece of a bon - net; She loves to 'tend balls, she look ver - y "gush - ing" and ten - der; If old "Rip - van - wink," should think it a - maz - ing - ly fun - ny; To be a good wife is loves to make calls, She al - ways looks fad - ed and wea - ried, She's wake up I think, The peo - ple by him would be que - ried, To such a dull life, Of house - keep - ing she be - comes wea - ried, Then of the same stripe, a ver - y good type, Of the present young girl of the pe - riod.

 know whence she came, and what was the name, Of this dashing young girl of the pe - riod.
 "Hub-by" will find he must have been blind, When he wed this young girl of the pe - riod.
