Allegro, Moderato.

3. O mothers, whose sons tar-ry long at the bowl, Who love their good name as you love your own soul; O maidens, with lands, His victims are falling on ev'-ry hand, The wise and the gone, The hearts that were mer-ry are wretched and lone, And lives full of fathers, and brothers, and beaux; Whose lives you would res-cue from sim-ple, the brave, and the fair, No sta-tion too high for his promise of good things to come, Are ru-ined and wrecked by the
